APPROACHES AND METHODS IN THE TEACHING OF ENGLISH LITERATURE

Tuesday, 05th, March, 2024.

Problematic

In language teaching classrooms, producing autonomous learners capable of addressing their learning issues is of paramount importance. Similarly, the teaching of literature primarily aims at constructing individuals with literary competence able to develop a perspective on the message of the literary text so that they can apply the critical thinking to other different contexts. This perspective can be on both form and content. Therefore, these literary skills are only achieved through appropriate approaches and methods. In this regard, two questions arise: On the one side, how can we improve the teaching of literature, and on the other side, considering the context of universal multiculturalism, globalization and digital age, is it time to review and re-examine our methods of teaching literature ?

Aims

- Discuss, evaluate and re-examine our methods in teaching English literature in the light of present variables such as: globalization, digital age and multiculturalism.
- Share the teaching experiences of literature in general and English literature in particular among teachers.
- Discuss the challenges that face teachers of literature and suggest means to overcome them.
- Discuss the appropriate approaches and methods in the teaching of literature in general and English literature in Particular.

Themes : (but not limited to)

- What are the challenges that face teachers of literature and how could they be overcome?
- The effect of universal multiculturalism, globalization and digital age on the teaching of English literature.
- Teaching English literature in large classes.
- What makes a good literature teacher?
- What should we take into consideration in the teaching of English literature?
- The connection of the approach with the objectives in the teaching of literature.
